To: Sen. Winfield, Representative Tercyak, and Members of the Labor and Public Employees Committee

Thank you for the opportunity to address you regarding the ABC Test at the public hearing on SB 912 and HB 6793, and for the opportunity to send this comment and the attached documents to you a day late.

As stated at the hearing, our concern with these bills is not the increased penalties per se, although a ten-fold increase in SB 912 is extreme, but rather with the underlying rules on which they are based, i.e., the ABC Test for classifying workers. We support strong enforcement of our laws in order to help level the playing field for all actors. However, the ABC Test does not work well for a few distinct industries that do not work in static settings such as a manufacturing facility, retail store, restaurant, office setting and many other businesses. Construction is one of these few distinct industries.

Our detailed mark up of the ABC Test fully explains the confusion and issues we have with the rule (see attached). We have also drafted a proposed legislative fix to the specific issues within the construction industry (also attached). Admittedly, we have not tried to introduce this legislation last year (when we crafted it) or this year and offer it only in response to questioning from the Committee yesterday. Also, our proposal is not limited to residential construction. If deemed appropriate to so limit these specific industry rules, we suggest limiting it to 1-6 family unit buildings because that's the threshold for being required to register as a home improvement contractor.

Again, thank you for the opportunity to address you on this issue. I would be happy to answer any questions you may have.

Sincerely,

Bill

SELF-ASSESSMENT OF THE EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RELATIONSHIP FOR CT UNEMPLOYMENT TAXES

The determination of independent contractor status versus employee status is often a complex decision. Connecticut unemployment law states that employment is any service performed under an express or implied contract of hire that creates the relationship of employer and employee. Workers who are employees under the common law definition of master and servant (the standard applied by the Internal Revenue Service) are therefore covered for state unemployment purposes. In Connecticut however, irrespective of whether the common law relationship of master and servant exists, the law holds that service will be considered employment subject to the act unless the service recipient can establish compliance with Connecticut General Statutes Section 31-222(a)(1)(B)(ii), commonly referred to as the ABC test which is outlined below.

To be considered an independent contractor, an individual must meet all three of the following tests.

- A. The worker must be free from direction and control in the performance of the service, both under the contract of hire and in fact. (Essentially, this is the common law definition.) {Home builders & remodeler general contractors must, by necessity, exercise some degree of control over subcontractors on a home job site. There would be complete chaos if "free from direction and control" means no direction or control. While a GC doesn't set specific hours in which a sub must work, they must control the overall schedule and set specific start and completion dates. GC's don't control how specific tasks are done, but must control the overall sequence of work so a home is built properly and efficiently, and GCs must set quality expectations. The quality expectations of both the GC and the home buyer/homeowner must be corrected immediately, which means the GC must exercise some direction and control over the sub immediately to achieve the quality expectations. That should not automatically convert those subs into employees. Comments are provided below on each of the 20 questions that make up the "A" part of the ABC test.}

AND

- B. The worker's services must be performed:

EITHER

(1) Outside the usual course of the employer's business {This needs clarification because sometimes a GC's employees will perform a particular task, but at other times an independent subcontractor must be brought in to perform the same task because the employees are working on a different home or otherwise engaged in other work in, for example, a subdivision.}

OR

(2) Outside all of the employer's places of business. {This needs clarification because if the home construction site is considered the employer's "place of business" this test can never be passed. By definition, all or most construction work is done at the home under construction. It's an absurd interpretation of the law to say that work done at the construction site is not outside the employer's place of business and that needs to be fixed.}

AND

C. The worker must be customarily engaged in an independently established trade, occupation, profession or business of the same nature as the service being provided. {See our comments on part "C" of the ABC Test below. For the residential construction industry, perhaps unlike some other industries, part "C" is much less of an interpretation issue than is parts "A" and "B". The distinctions between industries and professions in this regard highlight how the one-size fits all use of the ABC Test does not serve CT's businesses very well.}

It is important to note that test A above will not be satisfied if the person or persons for whom the service is performed retain the right to exercise direction and control over the service, even when the right is not used. Also, bear in mind that an individual who forms a business in response to an offer of work as an independent contractor will meet neither the "customarily engaged" nor the "independently established" criteria of test C.

The following form is designed to allow you to perform a self-examination of the status of workers in your business whom you consider to be independent contractors.

The determination of a worker's status is both technical and complex. This self-assessment is designed only as a guide; it is not an official Department of Labor form. As an aid to determining whether an individual is an employee (EE) under the common law rules or an independent contractor (IC), twenty factors or elements have been identified as indicating whether sufficient control is present to establish an employer - employee relationship. These twenty factors have been developed based on an examination of cases and rulings considering whether an individual is an employee.

These twenty factors are designed only as guides for determining whether an individual is an employee. The degree of importance of each factor varies depending on the specific situation. No single fact or small group of facts is conclusive evidence of the presence or absence of control. There will be situations where some factors do not apply. Careful scrutiny is required to assure that formalistic aspects of an arrangement designed to achieve a particular status do not obscure the actual substance of the arrangement. (That is, if the relationship of employer-employee exists, the designation of the relationship by the parties as anything other than that of employer-employee is immaterial.)

THE COMMON LAW IS ALSO TEST "A" OF THE "ABC" TEST FOR CT UNEMPLOYMENT
#	FACTOR	DESCRIPTION	EE	IC	DNA
A1	INSTRUCTIONS	Does the firm provide instructions or procedures the worker is expected to follow in doing the work?	YES	NO
{By necessity, YES, in almost all cases. We're not building widgets or jet engines. Almost every home is unique, framing differs from house to house, many others things are designed differently from house to house, and change orders frequently come from home buyers or homeowners that necessitate immediate instructions. Instructions and procedures given to subcontractors are necessary for them to get the job done correctly. That should not turn them into employees.}
A2	TRAINING	Does the firm provide training to the worker?	YES	NO
{Generally NO, but it's unclear when providing instructions and procedures, Q A1, are deemed to be training under this Q A2. Also, other laws or GC practices may require that all workers, both employees and independent contractors, coming onto a home construction site abide by certain rules, or go through safety training. The type and level of training the question is intended to illicit needs to be clarified.}
A3	INTEGRATION	Does the continuation of the scope and function of the firm depend appreciably upon the services of the worker?	YES	NO
{Of course it does, so YES. A GC will have an inspection schedule and, therefore, must schedule work accordingly. For example, the GC cannot schedule an electrical inspection if the wallboard has been put up. Also as noted earlier, quality expectations and performance are critical. There can be 20 or more independent subcontractors that touch a home under construction. Each and every one is by necessity integrated into the successful completion of a home. If any one

independent sub messes up its work, the home buyer or home owner is not going to be happy, in some cases all other work must cease until it's corrected, and the GC may not get paid, or the home buyer won't close a transfer, so, YES, the continuation of the GC's firm is put in jeopardy by and "depends appreciably" upon the services of the worker, be it an employee or IC.)
A4	PERSONAL SERVICE	Does the firm require the personal services of the worker to get the job done?	YES	NO
{What does personal services mean? Needs clarification. A legitimate independent contractor, which is hired by a GC to perform work on a home under construction, (e.g., fire place installer, closet shelving installer, painter, roofer, many others) may also be engaged by the GC to work on the GC's own home – is this what the question is intended to know? If so, why? An independent contractor is free to say no to doing the work on the GC's own home.}
A5	ASSISTANTS	Does the firm hire, supervise and pay for any assistants needed by the worker to do the work?	YES	NO
{No, the GC pays their own employees as employees. The independent sub pays their own employees as employees.}
A6	CONTINUING RELATIONSHIP	Does the relationship between the firm and the worker contemplate continuing or recurring work?	YES	NO
{YES, of course, but what does "contemplate" mean in this context? Every subcontractor goes into a home construction job hoping to be reengaged for the next home, or even every home in a subdivision. It's also every GC's understanding that continued or recurring work may occur if the subcontractor performs under their contracts to the GC's standards. Good subcontractors are sometimes hard to find; when you do find one, a GC wants to continue their GC/Sub relationship. Answering this question YES should not convert independent contractors to employees.}
A7	HOURS OF WORK	Does the firm set the hours of work or the amount of hours to be worked by the individual?	YES	NO
{Sometimes, the "hours of work" must be set for both employees and subcontractors in order to coordinate schedules with other subcontractors or the GC's employees' work, abide by local noise ordinances or the requirements of a home owner (e.g., homeowner says they want all workers, GC's employees or subs, off the job site between certain hours). Generally, though, the "amount of hours to be worked" is not set for subcontractors.} So, Q A7 asks two questions, the first is often answered YES, the second NO. So, given only one answer choice, what does a GC do?}
A8	FULL TIME	Is the worker required to devote full time to the firm during the relationship?	YES	NO
{Uncertain answer; needs clarification. A subcontractor is often required to finish a job within a start and completion date, or before moving onto another job. That's necessary to efficiently schedule the work of many subcontractors. The requirement "during the relationship" is also confusing because it could be as simple as hiring a subcontractor to do their job, which may take only a day or two, yet for scheduling purposes and perhaps safety reasons, the sub is required that once started the job requires full attention by the sub until it gets done. Is that a "full time" requirement that triggers a YES to this question? It should not, nor should such normal and frequent requirements convert IC subcontractors to employees.}
A9	PLACE OF WORK	Is the individual required to perform the work on the firm's premises?	YES	NO
{By definition, home construction work is required to be done at a home construction site. A home construction site is not a manufacturing setting, factory facility or an office. For building construction, if the site of the construction is considered to be the GC's premises, the question is nonsensical and absurd. See also Test "B" below. Components that go into a home may be fully or partially built off-site at a subcontractor's or manufacturer's facility but finish construction or installation at the home construction site is done by the subcontractor who started the work off-site, or by another business entity altogether (e.g., an installer who receives delivery from a manufacturer or distributor of a component, and installs it at the home site). If the home construction site is considered to be the GC's premises, the question must always be answered YES. That's a ridiculous result and is a demonstration that building construction work is unlike most other types of work places. The question needs to be clarified to accommodate building construction's unique situation.)

A10	ORDER OR SEQUENCE	Is the worker required to perform the services in an order or pattern set by the firm?	YES	NO
-----	-------------------	--	-----	----	--

{YES, there is always a required sequence ("order or pattern" ?) that is set by the GC and demanded by the overall scheduling of multiple subcontractors and both the GC's, lender's and government official's inspections of the construction work. Contracts and good business practices will set these sequences. Answering YES here for construction work should not convert subcontractors to employees.}

A11	REPORTS	Is the worker required to give oral or written reports to the firm on the state of the work?	YES	NO
-----	---------	--	-----	----	--

{YES, subcontractors must at least verbally report to the GC if the sub's work is completed, if there's a problem that's been encountered (e.g., independent framing sub reports to the GC that the independent plumber drilled so many holes in the wall studs that structural integrity has been compromised, many other examples of necessary communications), if the sub needs more materials, or has to come back the next day. Without the constant communication between subcontractors and the GC there would be chaos on a construction job site. Requiring this communication should not convert subcontractors into employees.}

A12	PAYMENTS	Is the worker's pay based upon time worked?	YES	NO

{Generally NO, but while jobs are bid, some are done on an hourly basis by independent subcontractors. It is difficult to price some work on certain home construction sites, so subs will bid on a time and materials basis. Change orders, too, that come from either the GC or the home buyer or home owner (e.g., for inside trim, paint colors, countertops, fixtures, many other items) can be last minute and be quite involved. For many trusted subcontractors, with whom the GC has experience, the sub is allowed to bill the GC on a time basis.}

A13	EXPENSES	Does the firm pay the worker's expenses?	YES	NO

{Generally NO; but a subcontractor's expenses are generally included in the quote or bill for the work performed.}

A14	TOOLS & MATERIALS	Does the firm furnish the tools and materials needed to do the work?	YES	NO
-----	-------------------	--	-----	----	--

Like question A7, for the construction industry, these are two distinct questions comingled together. Generally, the tools to do a subcontractor's work are not provided; the sub brings their own tools to the job site. But materials are often supplied by the GC. For example, lumber is bought by the GC, delivered to the job site by the lumberyard, and the GC hires an independent framer to perform the framing work. The same can be said for many other types of materials, such as wallboard, tile, flooring, light fixtures, bathroom fixtures, appliances, furnaces and other equipment – all bought by the GC and delivered to the home construction site, but installed by independent subcontractor craftsmen and installers. These subs or installers may also bring other materials to the job site (e.g., the GC supplies the fixtures and appliances, and maybe even piping and conduit, but the plumber and electrician brings minor parts). The GC's purchase and supply of many materials is important for quality control reasons, bulk pricing advantages, and for the GC's control of warranty relationships with suppliers and manufacturers so the GC can better service their home buyer or home owner client. So, with legitimate independent subcontractors, the tools question is answered NO but the materials question is often answered YES and that answer should not convert subcontractors to employees. If given only one choice, what does a GC do?)

A15	INVESTMENT	Does the worker have a significant investment in the facilities used in doing the work?	NO	YES
{Question is unclear. What is meant by "facilities" used in doing the work? Certainly, some legitimate subcontractors have a significant investment in the tools and vehicles they own to get their work done. So, we presume YES would be the correct answer. Some other legitimate subcontractors may require little or no investment, need no or few tools, just their time and expertise, to get their job done. We presume a GC could answer NO for them, but that should not make them the GC's employees. Some subcontractors will invest their time and materials to do their work but not get paid until the GC gets paid by the lender or homeowner. In that sense, those subs have a significant investment in the "facilities." Needs clarification.}
A16	PROFIT OR LOSS	Can the worker realize a profit or suffer a loss as a result of the services performed for the firm?	NO	YES
{For most employees, NO, but for an employee with an ownership interest in the GC, YES. For subcontractors, the answer would be YES, they can realize a profit or a loss on any job.}
A17	WORKS FOR MORE THAN ONE FIRM	Does the individual work for a number of firms at the same time?	NO	YES
{Generally YES, a subcontractor can work for a number of GC's at the same time, but the nature of the work or scheduling requirements may require the sub to complete one job before moving onto the next job. Also, for sole proprietor or very small independent subs who work by themselves or with 1 or 2 employees, the answer is necessarily NO. These subs cannot work for more than one firm at the same time because it's physically impossible. Answering NO for them should not convert them into the GC's employees.}
A18	OFFERS SERVICES TO THE PUBLIC	Does the worker offer this service to the general public?	NO	YES
{This question is incomplete. Some independent subcontractors work only on new construction or only for GC's and, therefore, do not "offer" their services to the general public, although there is nothing that precludes them from doing so. The question should be rephrased to capture the reality of construction work: i.e., Does the worker offer, or could the worker offer, this service to the general public? If rephrased, this question would be answered YES for independent contractors and NO for employees as the question intends to solicit.}
A19	RIGHT TO FIRE	Does the firm have the right to discharge the worker at any time?	YES	NO
{If discharge also means a GC can stop an independent subcontractor's work, then the answer is necessarily YES. Absolutely, a GC should be able to stop the IC's work (i.e., discharge the worker?) if they're committing code violations, not meeting quality expectations, don't show up for the job as scheduled, causing safety issues or other disruptions on the job site, or for any other contract violations. Most GC's would, therefore, answer this question YES, but that should not convert ICs into employees.}
A20	RIGHT TO QUIT	Does the individual have a right to terminate the relationship at any time without incurring liability?	YES	NO
{Most GCs cannot accurately answer this question without legal counsel. A subcontractor (IC) may have the right to terminate the work relationship if the GC does not act in good faith or does not perform its end of the agreement (e.g., the GC has not supplied the lumber necessary for a framer to start work, and the framer has other jobs they have scheduled and cannot wait for the GC to perform). Whether or not the IC's termination of work results in the IC incurring liability is a legal question of contract law. Also, some employees, particularly management employees in larger companies, may work under an employment agreement. And, if the employee terminates his employment contrary to the terms of such agreement, liability may be incurred, necessitating a NO answer to the question (implying they're an IC not an employee). Therefore, without more information, the answers to this question do not necessarily lead to concluding the worker is an employee or IC.}

IRRESPECTIVE OF THE RESULT OF THE COMMON LAW DETERMINATION ABOVE, YOU MUST ALSO SATISFY BOTH TEST B AND TEST C BELOW.

TEST B: ANSWERING EITHER OF THESE QUESTIONS AS IC WILL SATISFY THIS TEST

#	FACTOR	DESCRIPTION	EE	IC	DNA
B1	OUTSIDE USUAL COURSE OF EMPLOYER'S BUSINESS	Is the service provided part of the employer's normal business operation? {See comment on pg 1}	YES	NO
B2	OUTSIDE EMPLOYER'S PREMISES	Does the individual perform any of the work on the firm's premises? {See comment on pg 1, and comment on question A9. Again, if the home construction site is considered the "firm's premises" the question is absurd.}	YES	NO

TEST C: THIS TEST MUST BE APPLIED TO EACH INDIVIDUAL. SIMILARLY SITUATED WORKERS MAY DIFFER IN THEIR RESPONSE TO THIS FACTOR.

#	FACTOR	DESCRIPTION	EE	IC	DNA
C1	ENGAGED IN AN INDEPENDENTLY ESTABLISHED BUSINESS OF THE SAME NATURE AS SERVICE PROVIDED	Is the worker customarily engaged in an independently established trade, business, occupation or profession of the same nature as the service being provided? (Items A13-A20 may help to determine the existence of a business.)	NO	YES

(Test C is generally not a problem, but the important note to make on this is that many services related to home construction can be performed by both employees or legitimate independent subcontractors. The important determinant here is whether the person performing the work is set up as an independent business, e.g., has their own business license, letterhead, business card, etc. as noted below. Test C answers should override answers on Test A and Test B. The key is that a preponderance of these items in Test C should be established prior to forming the working relationship between the firm and the worker.)

POTENTIAL EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT YOUR DETERMINATION REGARDING TEST C

Business license	Letterhead stationary	References of other clients
Business liability insurance certificate	Advertisements in yellow pages, newspapers, trade journals, etc.	Registration for or collection of state sales tax on the services provided.
Business card	Bills or invoices with a logo or trade name	Federal identification number for the business.

Home Builders & Remodelers Association of Connecticut, Inc.
Legislative Proposal

Amend Chapter 567, Unemployment Compensation, Section 31-222, to accommodate the contractual relationships between construction general contractors and legitimate independent subcontractors.

The Issue: Under this law and the CT Dept. of Labor's "ABC Test" that implements the law, both of which have applicability to all businesses, a worker is classified as either (1) a legitimate independent contractor (IC) of a general contractor (GC) and, therefore, no unemployment tax is due by the GC; or (2) an employee of the GC and, therefore, the GC must pay UC taxes for that employee. For the reasons stated below, our proposal clarifies, specifically and only for construction projects, the meaning of "free from control and direction" – subsection 31-222(a)(1)(B)(ii)(I) – and "place of business" where work is performed – subsection 31-222(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II).

Reason for Proposal: Due to the way these two provisions and the ABC Test are being interpreted and enforced by CT D.O.L., home builders, remodelers and other construction general contractors are being hit with back unemployment compensation tax assessments and interest rate penalties. A copy of the ABC Test, with our comments on each part of the test, is attached. Our comments explain in detail and with examples why the law and ABC Test are problematic for our industry.

We understand the need to seek revenues for the UC fund and to have strong enforcement of laws to make sure the playing field is level for all. However, aggressive enforcement should start with having clear rules that are easily understood and followed by the regulated community. The ABC Test does not work well for a few distinct industries that do not work in a manufacturing or office setting. Construction, particularly residential construction, is one such industry. This unreasonable burden on CT home builders and remodeling contractors is an unwarranted cost that we cannot afford.

Uniquely for building construction projects, some degree of control by GCs over legitimate ICs must be allowed: Under current law and practice, it is extremely difficult for a construction GC to have any subcontractor meet the test of independent contractor. The very nature of construction requires that GCs exercise some degree of control over subcontractors or there would be chaos at construction sites. Our amendment allows GCs to require independent subcontractors to follow plans, specifications and workmanship standards, to coordinate with other contractors and suppliers on a site and to work at times certain or in a certain order (e.g., you can't have an electrical rough-in done before framing is completed).

Also, the requirement that independent subcontractors do not work at the general contractor's "place of business" makes no sense in the construction context – If construction sites of the general contractor, versus the GC's business office, are deemed to be the GC's "place of business." Subcontractors by definition have to work at the construction site and could never meet the test of performing their work "outside of all the places of business" of the GC. Thus, all ICs will always be deemed employees. Our amendment clarifies that construction sites are not the GC's "place of business." Finally, we believe Test C of the ABC Test should be determinative of the employee vs independent contractor analysis, overriding the A and B portions of the test.

The proposed amendment to C.G.S. section 31-222 (a)(1)(B) is attached. It is not limited to residential (e.g., 1-6 family unit buildings), but could be:

1 Sec. 31-222(a)(1)(B). Definitions. As used in this chapter,
2 unless the context clearly indicates otherwise:

3 (a) (1) "Employment", subject to the other provisions of this
4 subsection, means:

5 (A) . . . . ;

6 (B) Any service performed prior to January 1, 1978, which was 7 employment as defined in this subsection prior to such date and,
8 subject to the other provisions of this subsection, service
9 performed after December 31, 1977, including service in 10 interstate commerce, by any of the following:

11 (i) Any officer of a corporation;

12 (ii) except as provided in subdivision (iii) of this
13 subparagraph, any individual who, under either common law rules
14 applicable in determining the employer-employee relationship or 15 under the provisions of this subsection, has the status of an 16 employee. Service performed by an individual shall be deemed to 17 be employment subject to this chapter irrespective of whether 18 the common law relationship of master and servant exists, unless 19 and until it is shown to the satisfaction of the administrator
20 that (I) such individual has been and will continue to be free
21 from control and direction in connection with the performance of 22 such service, both under his contract for the performance of 23 service and in fact; and (II) such service is performed either
24 outside the usual course of the business for which the service
25 is performed or is performed outside of all the places of 26 business of the enterprise for which the service is performed;
27 and (III) such individual is customarily engaged in an 28 independently established trade, occupation, profession or 29 business of the same nature as that involved in the service
30 performed.

31 (iii) (I) Notwithstanding any other provision of the general
32 statutes, for the purposes of building construction projects,
33 including new construction and renovation, any requirement in 34 clause (I) of subdivision (ii) of this subparagraph (B), or 35 similar requirement that may be found in common law, stating an 36 individual must be free from direction and control shall not 37 include a general contractor's direction or instructions to a 38 subordinate subcontractor to: A. follow construction plans and 39 specifications, workmanship standards required by the general
40 contractor or building project owner, or change orders required
41 by the general contractor or project owner; B. undergo or 42 demonstrate proof of training, including safety training, that 43 may be required by law or conditions on a construction job site;
44 C. coordinate such subcontractor's work with other contractors,
45 workers or material suppliers at the construction site; or D.

46 conduct such subcontractor's work at times certain or in a 47 certain order or pattern at the construction site in order to 48 comply with the general contractor's need to manage the progress
49 of all work at such site, including but not limited to setting
50 specific start and completion dates. For the purposes of 51 building construction projects, including new construction and 52 renovation, (A) "free from direction and control" shall not be 53 determined on the basis that: the relationship between the firm
54 and the worker contemplates continuing or recurring work on 55 multiple home construction sites within an overall larger
56 construction site, such as a residential subdivision or site
57 plan; a requirement is placed on the worker to devote its full 58 time and attention to complete its work once such work is 59 started whenever in the opinion of the general or superior
60 contractor such requirement is necessary for scheduling the work
61 of other contractors or employees or for site safety purposes; a
62 requirement is placed on the worker to provide oral or written 63 reports to the general or superior contractor regarding the 64 completion status of the work being performed, any problems
65 encountered during the performance of the work, any material
66 shortages or needs related to the work, or any site safety
67 issues observed or encountered on the job site; (B) the 68 existence of a time and materials contract with a worker shall 69 not determine that the worker's pay is based upon time worked;
70 (C) a firm's supplying of materials or equipment to a
71 construction site that a worker then assembles or installs at 72 the construction site shall not be determinative of the worker's
73 status as an employee or independent contractor; and (D) a 74 firm's right to stop a worker's performance of its work at any 75 time shall not be determinative of the worker's status as an 76 employee or independent contractor if such stoppage is based on 77 the worker's violation of any construction plans or 78 specifications, building or other codes, quality expectations,
79 failure to show up or work as scheduled, or any safety or 80 orderly conduct requirements applicable to a construction site.

81 (II) Notwithstanding any other provision of the general laws,
82 for the purposes of building construction projects, including
83 new construction and renovation, the firm's premises or "places
84 of business" in clause (II) of subdivision (ii) of this
85 subparagraph (B), or similar terms that may be found in common
86 law, shall not include the site of the building being 87 constructed or renovated, and "outside the usual course of 88 business" shall not preclude a firm's employees from performing 89 the same work that is done by an independent contractor.

90 (III) Notwithstanding any other provision of the general laws,
91 for the purposes of building construction projects, including
92 new construction and renovation, the determinative factors in 93 classifying a worker as an employee or independent contractor
94 shall be the existence or nonexistence, prior to establishment

95 of the working relationship, of the worker holding or producing 96 a preponderance of the following, the worker's own: business
97 liability insurance certificate; business card; letterhead
98 stationary; advertisements in yellow pages, newspapers, trade
99 journals or similar publications; bills or invoices with a logo
100 or trade name; references of other clients; registration for or 101 collection of state sales tax on the services provided; federal 102 identification number for the worker's business; and the receipt
103 of a form 1099 for payments made for the work performed;

104
105 Renumber the remaining subdivisions accordingly, i.e.,

106 ~~(iii)~~ (iv) any individual other than an individual who is an 107 employee under clause (i) or (ii) who performs services for 108 remuneration for any person (I) as an agent-driver or commission
109 driver engaged in distributing meat products, vegetable 110 products, fruit products, bakery products, beverages, other than 111 milk, or laundry or dry-cleaning services, for his principal;
112 (II) as a traveling or city salesman, other than as an agent-
113 driver or commission-driver, engaged upon a full-time basis in 114 the solicitation on behalf of, and the transmission to, his 115 principal, except for sideline sales activities on behalf of 116 some other person, of orders from wholesalers, retailers,
117 contractors, or operators of hotels, restaurants or other
118 similar establishments for merchandise for resale or supplies
119 for use in their business operations; provided, for purposes of 120 subparagraph (B) (iii), the term "employment" shall include
121 services described in clause (I) and (II) above performed after 122 December 31, 1971, if 1. the contract of service contemplates
123 that substantially all of the services are to be performed
124 personally by such individual; 2. the individual does not have a 125 substantial investment in facilities used in connection with the 126 performance of the services, other than in facilities for 127 transportation; and 3. the services are not in the nature of a
128 single transaction that is not part of a continuing relationship
129 with the person for whom the services are performed;
